

PREACHER SAYS WOMEN WON WAR

Franchise League Hears of Prospect of Getting Soldier Vote.

The stand which men in the service are going to take in reference to the suffrage amendment was the theme discussed by Rev. F. M. Johnson, in his address to the members of the Equal Franchise League at its regular meeting, held Thursday afternoon at the central Y. W. C. A. building on Franklin street. He told of the part women played in the late war and gave her credit for her part in the victory which was won. As a result of the part played, Mr. Johnson declared that the 2,000,000 who were sent to Europe would not fail to support her in the part she should play during the period of reconstruction. Among other things he said:

"Every man who was in the front line trenches fully realized the part women played in the war. There were the women of the Red Cross service, of the canteen service, of the hospital and the Salvation Army. These women who did more to alleviate the suffering than can ever be known by any one else, and I dare say, there is not a single one, whether officer or enlisted man, who is not in favor of woman suffrage. They realize that woman was the great support back of them in the sacrifice they were making and that she should be of as great importance now as during the war."

"To any man who opposes her vote, I'd like to ask him who won this war? She won this war as she has won every war our country has ever won. It was she who sent her dear ones and gave her time to war work while she patiently awaited their return. Now we shall stay behind her and give her the vote she so justly deserves. For those men who think the place for a woman is at home surrounded by hot water and dirty dishes, I would say that it is in good enough to be used in the camp, the hospital and every type of war work that has been devised, why should she be put on the shelf in the matter of politics?"

It was announced by the president of the league, Mrs. O. A. Critchett, that Tuesday evening, May 12, had been set for the dance to be given at Liberty hall under the auspices of the Equal Franchise League. The proceeds to be used for the benefit of the suffrage campaign fund. The committee having charge of arrangements consists of Mrs. J. M. Hurt, chairman; Mrs. Robert Townsend and Mrs. C. A. Sorrell.

A resolution, approving the passage of the Towner education bill by the 54th United States congress, was passed. The resolution will be presented from the Franchise League to other women's organizations in the city for approval.

Donations toward the suffrage campaign fund were received from R. F. Thompson, Frank Hall, Chas. N. Bassett, R. B. McClinton and L. T. Campbell.

Mrs. W. A. Rogers, Mrs. Leola Stegman, Mrs. Wm. Dunn Stegman and Mrs. Thomas Griffin were received as new members.

When she graduates in June, Miss Cordia F. Hinkley, of St. Louis, will have the distinction of being the first woman to receive from the Missouri university a degree of bachelor of science in electrical engineering.

1,000,000 Are Jobless, Yet Nobody To Work

London Can't Get Things Done, Although Many
Are Not Working.

London, Eng., April 25.—There's at least a million men and women out of jobs in these British Isles today, yet the public is put to all manner of inconvenience because employers say: "No labor."

Garbage and ashes are removed but once a week; in some cases once a fortnight.

Laundry cannot be returned under a week, because of the shortage of ironers, all laundry work, practically, being done by hand.

The butcher having registered customers, makes his customers line up like a Salvation army chieftain dispensing provisions to devotees.

To get a plumber, carpenter or glazier to do an odd job requires numerous letters writing and a couple of weeks' wait for "your turn."

Shooting Everywhere.

There's a shortage of tailors, store clerks, paper hangers, taxi drivers, truck movers, waiters, servants and coal heavers.

If it's a question of getting a trunk transferred from a house to a railway station one must prepare for lengthy negotiation and delay and inconvenience.

Yet the state is paying $5,000,000 a week in unemployment benefits.

Nearly 2,000,000 men have been demobilized from the army since November and some 750,000 women have been turned out of their wartime jobs. Yet storekeepers continue to operate with small staffs, knowing the people are used to inconvenience, and but very few establishments make any attempt whatever to increase trade through greater accommodation. It's the same with small tradesmen, and England is a country of small tradesmen.

Trains All Crowded.

Autobuses, suburban and subway trains are crowded and long lines of people stand in line at theaters, waiting their chance for a "gallery" seat. In this case is not a gallery at all, but a "hot stuff" on the ground floor.

Restaurants are so crowded at lunch time that one is fortunate who gets his "eat" and escapes within an hour. There's a shortage of waiters.

This explanation is found by the Evening News:

"The workers are holiday making. They have money to burn and are burning it."

So the average British citizen, accustomed from infancy to inconvenience, writes a letter to the Times, complacently pulling away at his inseparable pipe.

PERMANENT EXHIBIT OF EL PASO MADE PRODUCTS

A permanent exhibit of made in El Paso foods, as turned out by the El Paso manufacturing plants, is to be installed shortly in the lobby of the city market by the trade extension department of the chamber of commerce.

The three cases in which the exhibits are to be shown have been for several years in storage in a basement of the chamber of commerce and are now being overhauled. The exhibit will be trim and neat and rest on a table in the lobby of the extension department and under the patronage of the manufacturers' and industrial department.

FOREIGN HONORS FOR AMERICANS

How They May Be Received
And What the Laws
Are About Them.

Washington, D. C., April 25.—It is generally known that during the war many Americans received decorations and the titles that go with them, from foreign governments; and there seems to be an impression abroad in some quarters that these hitherto humble American citizens now have the right to be addressed as sir or lady, and to receive titles, for he received decorations.

If this were true, Gen. Pershing, when signing his name in full, would need several sheets of paper and an extra secretary to do the work of affixing titles, for he received decorations.

As a matter of fact, Gen. Pershing, went over as John J. Pershing, and he will return with the same set of names undisturbed by extra initials or prefixes. The names of all of our other decorated men, the medals they can wear, the titles, never having been bestowed, they have no claim to it.

Mystery of Titles.

The mystery of the title is explained this way: When King George V. of England, John Pershing, a member of the Order of the Bath, he presents himself with the medal of the order and makes a speech of presentation. It is a complimentary honor which he is conferring, similar to an honorary membership in an organization. To become a knight and receive a title, Gen. Pershing would have to go through the ceremony of the accolade in which the candidate kneels and is tapped on the shoulder with a sword by the king, as the knights were in the feudal days. An American citizen who would go through with this proceeding in a foreign court would thereby renounce his American citizenship, as he would vow fealty to the king conferring the title.

As the constitution now stands it provides that: "No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States. And no person holding any office of profit or trust under them shall, without the consent of the congress, accept of any present, emolument, office or title of any kind whatever from any king, prince, or foreign state."

When citizens are decorated.

This statement does not prevent United States citizens who do not hold office from accepting such honors, and it has a loophole which gives congress power to sanction any foreign honor offered to an office holder.

The reason for this clause in the constitution was that diplomatic officials were accustomed to receive gifts from the governments to which they were sent. When an ambassador left a post, a grateful monarch pinned a medal on him in recognition of his services, and in order that the diplomat might remember the country pleasantly, the sovereign often made a trifling gift worth anywhere from a few hundred to a few thousand dollars. These gifts did not always embarrass the diplomat, but congress and the people of the United States, fresh from a revolution, were radically opposed to anything that savored of nobility, or foreign favors, and so the clause was inserted as it now stands.

Soon, however, the consent of congress was being asked for this worthy ambassador and that to receive a gold pocket watch and some other appropriate gifts for his services, offered by an insistent ruler, while private citizens were being frequently honored.

Not Entitled to a Uniform.

Ten chances to one, this great and unappreciated soldier is not even entitled to the uniform he is wearing. And no one has ever heard of him in the unit to which he claims to belong.

When the "fake hero" is an American it is a comparatively easy matter to find out something about him. And if the daughter of the house is too deeply in love to give a single sane word.

So that congress, in a burst of democratic feeling, aroused by the approach of war of 1912, attempted to tighten the constitution, and did get an amendment passed by both houses to include all citizens of the United States in the list of foreign gifts and honors.

Amendment That Failed.

But when put in the state legislature.

Beware of the Military 'Hero' Who Boasts of His Own Deeds of Valor The Men Who Served With Honor in the War Are Marked by Modesty and Not Given to Hair Raising Tales.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A NUMBER of girls have written to me lately about their entanglements with "fake heroes," and they want advice about the best method of extricating themselves from their difficulties.

The easiest way of avoiding a scrape, to make an Irish bull, is to keep out of it in the first place. And another very good way these moments, when few things appear at their face value, is to keep on hand an extra supply of common sense and take a generous dose of it every time the impulse to do something rash overtakes you.

A large percentage of the men posing as "heroes" and the recipients of extraordinary decorations are not soldiers at all, and the other half are discredited military men who have served jail sentences.

Distasteful "hero" who brags much and flatters a lot. If he has been fighting Germany, practically single handed, all kinds of doughboys will know all about his exploits, and they will "put up with him," and talk about him, and do the bragging, and take occasion to tell you about the grand and glorious times in which he slaughtered so many Prussian snuff-balls.

The "hero," if he is genuine, will probably blush and murmur some deprecating words like "Bob."

But if he tells you many wonderful tales and no one knows him, and he is here at all, and he is not a relative, and his memory suddenly goes bad when you ask about his company, distrust that "hero." For seriously enough, the genuine hero is always modest.

War does something to the man of real achievement in the way of putting down such experiences as brag, boasting and blarney. He has been through too much of the real thing to get any genuine satisfaction out of these cheap little excursions into heroics and the land of make-believe.

But all to no effect. She fell deeply in love, made the secret marriage, and will probably spend some years at least, in repentance hereafter.

When the "hero" is Foreign.

When the "fake hero" is a foreigner it is a little more difficult to decide on his credentials. Though the same old rule of modesty holds good. The man who has done big things is inclined to be reticent about them, particularly if he is an Englishman.

The British have a beautiful word called "swank," and they avoid it, which is a good deal like our blarney, as if it were swank-guns. To any one who has heard Col. Blakeney, the great Canadian aviator, talk, it will not be necessary to define "swank."

So carefully did this modest hero avoid any intimation of being anything but a plain soldier, and the eighty odd German planes that he shot down, anything more than an all-in-the-day's-work stunt, that he came seriously near irritating his audience at times when they wanted to cheer his magnificent-like modesty.

Overworked Women Need This Tonic

This Minnesota Resident Was on Verge of Complete Breakdown When She Tried the Right Builder.

Work is sometimes an effective medicine but the average man or the average woman doesn't require a work prescription. There are thousands today who are on the verge of a breakdown because of overwork. In many cases their condition has been brought on by the necessity of keeping at work when they should have been in bed. This is especially true of those who suffered from the recent influenza epidemic and were unable to take sufficient rest during convalescence.

It is these people who are suffering today from general debility. They fatigue easily, food has no attraction for them and when eaten only causes distress. Other symptoms are palpitation of the heart, nervousness, frequent headaches and a general feeling of exhaustion.

The proper treatment in such cases is a tonic that will improve and increase the supply of blood. The blood carries nourishment to every part of the body and when it is rich and plentiful it carries strength to all parts of the system. The value of this treatment is illustrated in the case of Mrs. J. W. Peters, of No. 3704 Snelling Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

"I suffered for two years from overwork and worry," says Mrs. Peters, "and became extremely run down. I had a steady, dull, aching pain across the small of my back and when it was severe I was very nervous. I kept losing my strength and a day's work completely exhausted me. My eyes had a dull appearance, my appetite left me, I couldn't walk any distance without resting frequently. I slept well but didn't seem to be rested in the morning."

"I read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in a newspaper and procured a box. After I had taken one box the pain across my back left me completely and then my appetite began to improve and I regained my strength and weight. I'm no longer nervous, my sleep rests me and I can do a hard day's work without exhaustion. I have told others about the remedy for I have great confidence in its power to benefit cases similar to mine."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists or direct from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., at 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50. Write for a free copy of the booklet, "Building Up the Blood"—Adv.
